Adventurer's Guide

Knight Realms™ Rulebook

(Version 3.0.1 – Updated January 2023)

Preface

Knight Realms opened in April of 1998. For over two decades, the game has grown and evolved under the direction of its valued and caring players. In the past, there have been both major and minor changes and updates to the system, but not until recent years was I ready to embrace such a comprehensive and complete overhaul of the system – even to its core engine. Every member of our past rules teams has served our community well, always working hard for the single and selfless goal of wanting to bring you, the players, a better experience. Our newest team has shared in this same noble vision.

Such a dramatic change to the original system was bound to stir emotions and for several years we worked through the growing pains of a vastly different game. The rules published in this version of the book reflect years of seeing what changes players prefer and moving towards a hybrid of the best of both systems, new and old. I could not be happier with the results, which I believe still captures the heart and spirit of the original.

We hope you enjoy the fruits of this labor, and we look forward to living out countless adventures with you for years to come!

CHAPTER I: COMBAT

Silently, you stalk the woodline, hiding among the brush. You have been tracking your prey, a snarling beast with a penchant for destruction, for some time now. You stealthily approach from behind, hoping it doesn't turn around. Alas – you were careless; a twig snaps beneath your feet and it spins to face you in a blind rage. You abandon your plan of attack and fade behind a nearby tree, clambering up it to gain a better vantage point.

As the beast tries to follow your scent, you examine it more closely. Piercing its entropic hide will take more than a carefully placed blade. You scan your surroundings as you invent a new strategy, lobbing a knife at a nearby tree to create a distraction as you blink far enough away to enact your plan. Five... four... three... in a manner of seconds, you expertly arm a steel trap, concealing it with fallen leaves. Letting out a breath, you cup your hands to your mouth and shout, inciting it to come for you. You ready your blade as it falls into your trap, howling in pain.

Weapon Proficiencies and Combat

Knight Realms uses padded weapons to simulate combat. For the Out-Of-Game (OOG) safety of all players, weapons must be approved for combat before being brought into the game. Check your game's website for information on obtaining weapon approval.

Combat is an important part in the progression of stories at Knight Realms. It is up to the heroes to thwart their adversaries, after all!

- Though combat creates a very mechanics-heavy scenario, it's important to remember to roleplay throughout it. React to whatever is thrown at you, and put your all into what you throw back!

Specific Proficiency Skills

Each class will have a skill for specific types of proficiencies (sometimes called profs) based on their class. A character may only buy three profs per class, regardless if the class has access to multiple types. The effects of one type of prof never stack with a different type of prof.

Type	Description
Melee	+1 damage with 1-handed melee weapons +1 damage with brawlers +1 damage with thrown weapons +2 damage with 2-handed melee weapons
Metaphysical	+1 damage with small casting phoki +2 damage with large casting phoki
Piercing	+1 damage with 1-handed melee weapons +1 damage with brawlers +1 damage with thrown weapons and arquebuses +2 damage with bows and crossbows Backstab Condition: Small weapons, excluding Brawlers , deal +2 damage

Florentine Rules

Brawling

A character wielding two brawlers may swing the same damage with both brawler weapon representations.

Standard Florentine Rules

Total current damage in one hand may be reduced by one, to add one point of damage to the other hand. There is no limitation on how many proficiencies may be transferred this way, however the character must spend 30 seconds to adjust these damage totals.

If you are suffering from the DISARMED status while fighting with two weapons, you do not automatically re-adjust to your total damage with a single 1-handed weapon.

Same Weapons

With two 1-handed melee weapons, two small casting phoki, or two 1-handed arquebuses/crossbows, you can distribute the damage in any way between the two. If you distribute the damage as evenly as possible, you gain an extra +1 damage proficiency to both weapons.

Mismatched Weapons

The character may florentine different weapons styles such as 1-handed melee and 1-handed arquebus/crossbow, 1-handed melee and one small casting phoki, 1-handed casting phokus and 1-handed arquebus/crossbow. The character choses a damage proficiency they have and distribute it evenly between the two weapons. You must have access to a proficiency on your list to enhance both weapons. You must be wielding both weapons in hand in order to gain the benefit.

Full Support Proficiencies

Instead of Standard Proficiency rules, Alchemist and Physician have a unique set of proficiencies listed on each class. Each class will have a skill for a specific type of proficiency that is associated with their list. You may only buy three of these proficiencies per list.

New Adventurer Kit

While you have one base list class, you gain +2 to your first proficiency.

While you have two base list classes, you gain +1 to your first proficiency.

When you have 3 or more base list classes, you lose the New Adventurer Kit benefit.

Combat and Physical Contact

Knight Realms uses a lightest touch system for combat. This means that in order to participate in weapon combat, the player should use the absolute gentlest force necessary for the targeted player to acknowledge that they have been hit.

- Players may not charge other players in combat or otherwise tackle, bodycheck, or grapple them.
- Excessively powerful strikes, as well as strikes to the head, groin, or hands, are considered illegal – you should ignore any damage or skills from one of these strikes and inform the offending player that they are not following the combat safety rules.
- You may not use your hands in combat for any purpose other than wielding your equipment or gesturing to use skills.
- Damaged weapons of any kind must be removed from play immediately.

Knight Realms is a no contact game. A player may never physically touch another player without their express affirmative consent.

- Even with a player's consent, physical contact greater than touching someone's shoulder or offering them a hand to stand up should never occur during combat or where the terrain may be unsafe.
- In a situation where you need to touch someone to get their attention for safety reasons, you should touch their shoulder or arm only.

When attacking a target wearing a green headband or firing a bow or crossbow, a player may not physically strike the target with any type of attack, including spell packets. Instead, they may call their damage and skills as an auto-hit within reach for melee attacks, or 25 feet for ranged attacks.

Melee Combat

Melee combat is the most common type of combat and involves physically striking your opponent with the striking surface of your weapon. When making an attack, there are a few things to keep in mind for safety.

- Pommels, grips, and crossguards are not valid striking surfaces.
- Thrusting is prohibited, even with “thrust-safe” weapons.
- A weapon should be swung in an arc between 60 and 120 degrees. “Machine gunning” with small, rapid swings is prohibited, as is attacking with large, baseball-style swings.
 - This should result in an average of 6 inches between the target and weapon per strike, though larger weapons will naturally have a larger arc.
- You may neither hook an opponent’s weapon to prevent them from using it nor strike it with excessive force to attempt to disarm them.
- You may not strike a ranged or casting phokus weapon with a melee attack.
- When a melee weapon is used to cast a spell, the target may defend it as if it were a melee attack

Attacks should be called in a clear and loud voice, with enough space between each call to distinguish them from each other. A character may not strike a single target with more than one attack skill per second.

Ranged Combat

There are several types of weapons at Knight Realms which fall under the ranged combat umbrella: thrown weapons, bows/crossbows, and arquebuses.

- Ranged weapons may not be swung around or used for melee combat.
 - This includes both striking targets and blocking melee attacks.

- When wielding a thrown weapon or bow/crossbow, you may perform a Steady Shot.
 - After five seconds of lining up your shot, you may auto-hit your base damage within 25 feet.
 - Using a bow or crossbow increases the range of Steady Shot to 100 feet.
- Bows and crossbows may not be fired at targets closer than 15 feet from the character, but may follow the Steady Shot rules within that range.
- Ranged weapon attacks may not be physically blocked or hit out of the air with weapons, but may be blocked with shields and bucklers.

When using an arquebus, the character must point the weapon at a target within 25 feet and fire the cap. If the cap goes off, the shot is successful, and the character may call their damage or skill.

- Arquebuses may be fired only once per 5 seconds.
- An arquebus may not be drawn or fired within 3 feet of another person.

Casting Phokus Combat

Casting phoki have special rules regarding their use.

- Casting phoki may not be swung around or used for melee combat, even if they are larp combat-safe.
 - This includes both striking targets and blocking melee attacks.
 - If a character is struck in their larp combat-safe casting phokus, they must take damage as if they were struck by the attack.
- When wielding a casting phokus of any size, you may auto-hit your base damage as an attack within 25 feet on a 5 second cooldown.

At the end of every rest, a caster with Metaphysical Proficiencies may choose to redirect their Phokus energy to their spells. While this option is activated the character may no longer use continuous phokus damage, but instead the damage can be added to each of their spells which do either damage or healing. You must still be wielding the appropriate phokus phys rep to receive the benefit of this option.

Using Skills

Most skills are designed for use in combat, while some can also be used in other scenarios.

A character must use only one damage type in any given damage call. If multiple damage types are applicable in a given scenario, you can choose any at the moment of the call. If a skill specifies that you must use a specific damage type, that one must be used. In the event that multiple skills force a damage type, the one used most recently is the applicable one.

A character may always choose to omit the numerical damage or status from an attack of any kind. While using a defense that redirects an attack, the character may still use the skill to defend even if the attack may not be redirected.

- When using an Attack skill, you must strike the target with your attack, then immediately call your damage or skill.
 - For example, a character striking an opponent with a basic melee attack would call “2 damage.” Using a copper sword, they would instead call “2 fire.” If they instead chose to use a skill, they would state the name of the skill, followed by any damage it deals, if applicable, such as “Impale, 40 damage.”
 - For auto-hit attacks, instead of striking the target, the character must gesture towards or point their weapon. The attack is then called in the same way.
- If you are targeted by an attack and wish to use a Reaction skill, you must respond immediately by stating the name of the skill and any additional effects, if applicable.

If the character uses a Movement skill, they should note this by putting their hand above their head in a closed fist and moving directly to their ending location as quickly as possible. Other beings, unless they are also using a Movement skill, may not follow the character’s movement.

Skills and spells that have a numerical effect can only be increased by up to 50%. A skill/spell/talent can always have their healing or damage be increased by a minimum of +10.

- ie. Moonglow can be increased from heal 10 body to 20 body
- Fiendish Whip can be increased from 20 necrotic to 30 necrotic
- Incinerate can be increased from 60 fire to 90 fire

SKILL TYPES AND KEYWORDS

Every Knight Realms skill has a number of associated keywords. The main keywords are called types or traits and appear on every skill in the game. Additionally, a number of keywords appear consistently in the rules. While most descriptions include everything you need to know about using a skill, these skill types and keywords are defined here for ease of understanding.

Trait Name	Description
Area Effect	An attack which affects more than one target within an area.
Attack	Offensively affects a being other than the character. Attack (Dam.) – an attack which deals damage as its sole effect. Attack (Status) – an attack which inflicts a status as its sole effect. Attack (Mix) – an attack which inflicts both damage and a status.

Augment	Grants the target some effect. A character may have no more than one stack of a given augment applied at a time.
Aura	Affects all targets within reach of the character.
Auto-hit	The effect is considered to hit the target as if the character had thrown a spell packet at them and must be defended as such. If applied to a skill with the Area Effect type, the skill becomes a single target attack.
Backstab	A condition in which the character is striking the target while standing behind them. This condition is also fulfilled any time the character is attacking with a ranged weapon.
Bane	The effect bypasses the target's resistances and immunities entirely.
Barrier	A wall of a specified shape that limits beings from moving passed it
By My Voice	A skill which affects all beings who hear it, unless specified otherwise.
Channeled	A skill which the character maintains after activating the skill. A character may channel no more than one effect at a given time.

Defense	Counters all or part of an attack targeting the character.
Detection	An attack which allows the user to ignore the CONCEALED effect . Using a Detection ability while CONCEALED does not dispel the effect.
Enhancement	A skill that grants a specified number of uses of an effect.
Healing	Restores body points or cures the target of statuses .
Inquiry	A skill which requires interaction with a marshal.
Latent	An ability that may be invoked for a specific effect. These abilities may be given to another target and may only stack once per ability unless otherwise stated.
Movement	Instantly moves the character somewhere else.
Negotiation	A skill that is negotiated with the target or a marshal to determine the final outcome of the effect.
Passive	A benefit continuously affecting the character or which may be used freely.
Periodic	The skill may be used once per rest per purchase.
Preparation	The time spent roleplaying the use of a skill before it takes effect. The character must be uninterrupted for the full duration of the preparation. The skill is considered interrupted if the character suffers an attack or takes any action other than using the skill or Defense skills. A character can only prepare one skill at a time.
Proficiency	A permanent bonus to the character.
Reaction	A skill used instantly in response to some other effect. A character may use no more than one Reaction per attack.
Redirect	Changing the target of an attack. An attack may only be redirected once.

Within Reach	A range within which the character could reasonably strike a target with the melee weapon they are wielding, to a minimum of 5 feet, including if the character is not wielding a weapon.

Statues and Effects

While participating in combat, a hero may find themselves facing attacks that deal more than mere wounds, temporarily empowered or weakened by different abilities. Whatever the case, temporary changes in the character's condition, or status, are defined here.

- Some statuses have a duration, while some persist until they are cured.
 - If a status has two specified durations, it can be cured by satisfying either requirement.

Statues

Bleeding

The character is bleeding profusely from a wound. Until the character is cured or INCAPACITATED, they suffer 5 damage every time they make an attack.

Blind

The character cannot see. Until the character is cured, they treat all targets as if they are CONCEALED and cannot attack targets more than 10 feet away.

OOG Note: Players of blind characters should not obscure their OOG vision in any way.

Broken Arm

The character's arm is broken. Until the character is cured, they may not use the targeted arm to wield a weapon. If an attack strikes an armament wielded in a BROKEN ARM, the character suffers the effect of the attack.

Broken Leg

The character's leg is broken. Until the character is cured, they may not move faster than a heel-to-toe pace and cannot use Movement skills. If both legs are BROKEN, the character cannot move unless carried by another being. After 5 minutes of suffering this effect, if the character is not in combat, they may crawl.

Broken Armament

The character's armament is broken. Until the Armament is cured, Equipment Abilities it possesses may not be used, and the character suffers the effect of all attacks that strike that Armament until the character spends 30 seconds of roleplay switching to another unbroken Armament.

Charmed

The character is taken in by a person's charm. For 5 minutes or until that subject of the Charm takes offensive action against them, the character may take no hostile action against the subject and regard them with no suspicion.

Controlled

The character's actions are controlled by another. The character must do their best to carry out the wording of the command issued by the ability. This ability only affects the target's physical actions and cannot be used for interrogation.

Cursed

The character is suffering from a curse. Until cured or for the duration specified on the skill, the character suffers the effect of the curse as specified in the skill description.

Disarmed

The character is unable to properly wield their weapon. The wielder of the weapon targeted may not use it for any purpose for 10 seconds.

Diseased

The character is suffering from a disease. Until cured or for the duration specified on the skill, the character suffers the effect of the disease as specified in the skill description.

Enfeebled

The character has been weakened. Until the character is cured, they may not invoke equipment abilities from any of their items.

Enraged

The character perceives the subject as an enemy. For 30 seconds, the character must attack the subject and may not use skills with preparation or interaction times unless those skills are Attacks.

Fatigued

The character is exhausted. For 30 seconds, the character's damage with all attacks is halved, rounding up if applicable.

Feared

The character is scared of the subject. For 30 seconds, the character may not take any offensive action against or move toward the subject of their fear.

Immobilized

The character's arms and legs are bound. The character may not move from their position, and may not make melee attacks or use spell packets.

Imprisoned

The character has been frozen in place. For 1 minute the character may not take any action, including moving and speaking, and cannot be affected by anything except skills that would cure this effect. Any effects and statuses with durations, both beneficial and harmful, are paused until this effect ends. If the character has IMPRISONED themselves, they may end this effect at any time.

Pinned

The character's limb is affixed to a surface. For 1 minute the character may not move from their position except to swivel or rotate around the affixed limb. For the duration the character is IMMUNE to DISPLACED.

Poisoned

The character is suffering from an invasive poison. Until the character is cured, they cannot benefit from any Healing towards their body points.

Sealed Skill

The character's skill has been sealed. For 30 seconds, the specified spell, talent, or periodic skill may not be used by the character.

Slowed

The character's movement has been hindered. For 30 seconds, the character may not move faster than a heel-to-toe pace, cannot use Movement skills, and must wait 5 seconds between every attack they make.

Stunned

The character has become disoriented. For 10 seconds, the character may not take any offensive action.

Tripped

The character has been knocked to the ground. The character may not stand for 10 seconds.

Waylaid

The character has been dazed. For 1 minute, the character may not take any action other than using Defense skills, including moving and speaking. If targeted by an attack, this effect instantly ends.

Weak

The character is particularly susceptible to the specified damage type. They treat attacks of that damage type as bane (bypassing all resistances and immunities) and suffer double the numerical damage.

Effects

Concealed

The character is hidden from view. For the duration specified by the activating skill, the character cannot be seen by any other being unless that being uses a skill that states otherwise. This is instantly dispelled if the character takes any action which affects another being, with the exception of speaking or using skills that state otherwise. This effect is represented by wearing a red headband or by placing your arm over your lower face with your elbow bent.

Critical

The character is on the brink of death. For 1 minute, the character falls to the ground and cannot move, use skills, or take any action. This effect may only be cured by skills that specifically cure CRITICAL. After 1 minute, the character becomes DEAD.

Dead

The character has died. This lasts until cured by a skill that specifically cures DEAD, the character may not take any action. At any time, the player may don a blue headband and become a spirit . Spirits are DEAD beings that may move around and interact with characters in a limited capacity.

Displaced

The character has been moved, by force or otherwise. The character must move as quickly as possible to the distance and direction specified by the skill. Unless otherwise noted, a physical barrier, including Barrier skills, will stop their movement. Skills that displace a character cannot move them vertically unless specified.

Highly Resistant

The character is extraordinarily resistant to the specified damage type. They suffer only half the numerical damage from attacks of that damage type, rounding up if applicable, to a maximum of 10 damage.

Immune

The character is immune to the specified effect. If targeted by the object of their immunity, they take no effect, unless they are willingly subjecting themselves to it.

Incapacitated

The character has been struck down to 0 body points. Until healed above 0 Body Points, the character must fall to the ground and cannot move, use skills, or take any action other than speaking at a conversational volume unless they regain body points. While out of combat, an INCAPACITATED character may slowly crawl towards salvation. An INCAPACITATED character targeted by a Killing Blow instantly becomes CRITICAL.

Resistant

The character is resistant to the specified damage type. They suffer only half the numerical damage from attacks of that damage type, rounding up if applicable. If a character is Resistant to an attack or damage type from two separate sources, the character becomes Highly Resistant to that form of attack.

Surprised

The character is unaware of the malicious intent. If a target has not targeted you with an attack in the last minute, and the character can't see a readied weapon(s), a character is considered surprised. Readied weapons are any phys rep for a weapon that is being used in a valid way for attacks for that weapon type. While CONCEALED, a target is only considered to be surprised by a character if they are physically out of sight and CONCEALED.

CHAPTER II: CHARACTERS

As stray beams of sunlight filter through the dusty windows of your room, you awaken to the enticing scent of frying meat wafting upstairs from the inn's kitchen. With a reluctant stretch and a rumble from your stomach, you climb out of bed and collect yourself. As you tie the laces of your boots and turn the cuffs of your sleeves, you look around to your comrades; they, too, are readying themselves for whatever the day may bring. You don your armor and tighten your belt. Pouch full of coins, satchel stocked with potions, and knives newly sharpened, you open the door to face the day, your party close behind you. Today is a day for adventure, after all!

Creating a Character

The first step to joining the adventure in the world of Arawyn is creating a character. While a character may appear to be nothing more than a list of game mechanics on paper (Knight Realms uses character cards (also called cards or character sheets) to track information, skills, and statistics) but in reality, a character is so much more. Beyond the vessel through which a player can experience the game, a character is a unique product of the player's imagination and design, the protagonist of their own story in which the player can immerse themselves.

- Think about the kind of character you would be excited to play.
 - Are they a boisterous soldier, a clever tactician, or a level-headed wizard? Knight Realms is a game, so play a character that will lead to the most fun!
 - Remember that a character can always grow and change, but if you become dissatisfied, you may rewrite or retire your character into a new one. See Retirement in Chapter V for more information.

After designing a concept, follow the rest of this section to bring your character to life within the world of Arawyn.

Choose a Background

Every character has a different life experience, including those who hail from the same kingdoms. When creating a character, decide where they come from and who they are. These choices will guide you to creating a personalized background in the next section.

Choose a Class

After creating a background, the next step in character creation is to choose a class. Knight Realms offers an assortment of playable character classes that can be divided into five archetypes: caster, hybrid, rogue, support, and warrior. Each archetype contains more specialized classes; though some may share skills, each has its own individual role in the game world.

Finishing Touches

A well-rounded character has more depth than their background and class. The basics to make a character feel real are described here, but players are always encouraged to add more. Ties, character flaws, ideals, and goals are all things to consider.

- What is your character's history?
 - Every character should have a brief backstory describing where they come from and what their motivations are.
 - Your world has a Timeline of events that may be helpful to review to know what has occurred in recent history and may have directly affected your character:
 - Arawyn: <https://www.worldanvil.com/w/knight-realms3A-arawyn-gallion>
 - You can submit your character's history online for approval at any time, but until it is approved, you should not act on information about the character's past.
 - If a character has an approved history on file, storytellers may access the information and use it to run personal content for the character.
- Is your character religious?
 - There are many deities, spirits, and higher beings revered by across the world.
 - A character may worship a specific higher power rather than a pantheon; however, to gain the associated alignment, the character must purchase the Devotion skill on the Common list.
- What is your character's name?
 - While different cultures may have different naming conventions, most have a first and last name. Some characters might use an alias instead of their given name.
 - Character names should not be borrowed from well-known media; if a character's name is easily recognized, the Director reserves the right to ask a player to change it.

Character Advancement

As a character grows in experience and as a hero, their potential for learning increases. This potential is represented as build points, a measure of how much training a character can go through to increase their power.

This section describes how to create your character and advance them past level 1 as they grow as an adventurer. Information on earning build can be found on your game's website.

- Only build spent on skills is counted towards the character's level.

Learning and Retraining Skills

All characters begin at level 1 with 50 points of build to spend on skills, which can be purchased from classes or the Common list. Each class's page lists the skills available to them with their mechanics and build costs.

- If your character is starting at a level higher than 1, whether from retirement or other means, you may spend no more than half of their build points, to a maximum of 430 (level 20). A character may always spend up to 50 build on their initial skills, regardless of their starting build total.

Prior to your character's first time in play, you may spend their starting build on skills. Past that, skills must be learned in-game from another character who possesses the skill.

- Learning a skill takes 5 minutes. The teacher should sign off the lesson on the student's character card.
- Once a character has learned a skill, they may train with another character for 5 minutes to purchase an additional use (if applicable). The other player does not need to know the skill to help you train. The build cost of skills increases with every purchase.
 - If a character trains by themselves, the skill takes 10 minutes to learn.
- A character may learn up to 50 build worth of skills per event. If the cost of their skills has increased past that point, they may learn up to two skills, regardless of cost.

If you are dissatisfied with your character's skills, you may retrain them.

- You may remove up to two skills or classes per event. The build cost is instantly refunded and may be spent during the same event.
- You may not remove any skills or classes which would cause you to lack a prerequisite, or in the case of classes, which would cause your character to have a negative build total.

- Within the first six months of playing a character, the player may fully rewrite their character card. After six months, to change the character entirely, they must retire. Players may only retrain all their spent build in this way, and this may not be used to add additional skills with unspent build.

All characters have a body point total which represents how much damage they can take before becoming INCAPACITATED. They also may have Armor Points which they apply damage to before they count damage against their body total.

- Every character has 10 base body points in addition to the points granted by their class.
 - For example, a character with the Hexer class has 10 base body and 5 body from their class, bringing their maximum body point total to 15.
- Additionally a character may gain a total of 40 body points from Augments, which may be healed for the duration of that Augment.
- Natural Armor Points such as from passive skills refresh at the start of a period, or may be refreshed upon the completion of a rest counting as one of the periodic skills being refreshed.

Backgrounds

With a long day of adventuring ahead of you, your party decides to enjoy a meal together before setting out. As they lay claim to a table in the inn and order a round of drinks, you take a moment to admire your friends and the close-knit band you've become. Your closest friend hails from a place where learning magic is as critical to the people as learning to walk; one comrade comes from a life of traveling the deserts, tired of a harsh life and looking for more; your third ally – a troublemaker, indeed, but a dear friend nonetheless – hails from a port town abroad, always knowing where to find a good mug of ale and some kind of excitement.

You gaze around the room as your meal arrives at the table, silently wondering what dreams or nightmares led the other patrons to come to this town. The inn is full of people from a vast variety of cultures whose stories you'd love to hear, if only you had the time.

The world is vast and diverse. It includes many different creatures and many different cultures. When a player creates a character, they must decide two things.

- What type of creature is the character?
 - The character's creature type determines their base appearance and if the player must wear any makeup or prosthetics to portray them.
 - There are no hard-set requirements to portray any type of creature, but guidelines for the standard appearance of the more common creatures may be found on the Knight Realms World Anvil website.
 - The character's creature type has no bearing on their skills or statistics.
- What type of culture influenced the character?
 - The character's culture, or background, might determine suggestions for their wardrobe and personality.
 - The chosen background grants the character-related skills.

Once these questions have been answered, the player may choose two different background abilities to create a custom background for their character. Suggestions can be found with the descriptions of creature types for players seeking guidance on what is “average” for different creatures in your world.

Background Skills

Choose any two background skills when creating your character regardless of category.

- The categories are here to give you guidance towards choosing background skills that fit with the theme of your character.
- The flavor text of backgrounds are only suggestions for roleplay; you are free to choose any you wish and roleplay them however you would like.
- Below, the layout for the skills is as follows:

Background Title (Skill Name)

History

History describes a character's past occupation or lot in life. Usually, this focuses on how they were raised and spent their early years, or how they spent their early adult years.

Aristocrat (Conciliate)

Born with a silver spoon in their mouths, aristocrats often live rich and opulent lives. They can trace their family line through generations of wealth and stature, a prestige that will carry throughout the ages.

Conciliate

Type: Periodic, Attack, Social

Choose a target within 5 feet. The target is CHARMED to the character for 1 minute.

Dispelled if: the character takes offensive action against the target.

Erudite (Mana Infusion)

Constantly yearning for more to learn and experience, the erudite person has an insatiable appetite for worldly knowledge. Late nights of reading take a lot to stay awake, and so it is no surprise that they would have just the right thing always on hand to keep them going.

Mana Infusion

Type: Periodic, Crafting, Refresh

On use: refresh one periodic skill and restore the character to their maximum body point total, to a maximum of 400 body. A being may benefit from Mana Infusion no more than once per period.

To craft as a Consumable: spend 5 minutes.

Loyalist (War Paint)

For King and Country, for hearth and home, for the bonds of kinship, the loyalist wears their dedication proudly. Their display invigorates them in any challenge because it is no longer themselves who they fight for, but their pride in where they come from.

War Paint

Type: Periodic, Crafting, Augment

After 5 seconds of preparation: gain +1 Damage proficiency of the character's choice.

Dispelled if: the character completes a Rest or after 1 hour.

To craft as a Consumable: spend 5 minutes.

Outcast (Transfer Essence)

Shunned by the people around their home, the outcast feels like they never truly belong. It is an isolating life, many taking up adventuring to find somewhere where they can finally be accepted.

Transfer Essence

Type: Periodic, Reaction, Combo

When targeted by an attack, the character may use a defense to nullify the effect regardless of whether it were melee or ranged. The character must defend or suffer the attack.

Soldier (Tactical Strikes)

Trained to fight, the soldier is most at home on the battlefield. They typically start as local militia, warriors for their kingdom, or sellsword mercenaries. If they take up adventuring, their tactical minds are valuable to any party.

Tactical Strikes

Type: Periodic, Utility, Augment

Gain +5 Damage proficiencies of the character's choice for the following 5 base damage attacks.

Lineage

Lineage describes forces beyond the character's control that have made them the way they are based on the circumstances of their birth. Those with an unusual lineage are usually born outside of mundane civilized society and have a sort of alien sense of what might be regular customs.

Ancient (Hover)

Born of long-standing and powerful bloodlines, heroes of ancient lineage have ancestry traceable to the old and powerful long-dead denizens of the world. Many of these races were capable of flight through some manner or another, and those who can trace their lineage back to these creatures often manifest a similar power.

Hover

Type: Periodic, Utility, Movement, Reaction, Defense

Nullify the entire effect of an instance of Falling Damage.

Or: the character floats 50 feet in the air, becoming unable to be targeted by melee attacks. They must represent this effect by holding their arms out to the sides, palms facing down.

Dispelled if: the character moves from their location or after 30 minutes.

Bestial (Blood Fury)

In touch with their inner animal, heroes of a bestial nature embrace their feral blood. They often let their instincts take over, as they accomplish their mission with primal fervor.

Blood Fury

Type: Periodic, Augment

Instantly deliver a Killing Blow and gain +3 damage proficiencies of the character's choice versus the next target they attack.

Blessed (Hand of Fate)

Fate smiles upon those of a blessed lineage. Heroes often seek to uphold the tenets and faith of the being that graced them as living examples of divine will.

Hand of Fate

Type: Periodic, Healing, Attack (Status), Attack (Damage)

Choose a target within reach. The target is cured of a status. The character gains a Latent use of an attack that inflicts that condition. If used on INCAPACITATED or CRITICAL, the target is healed to 1 body and the character gains a latent attack that deals 50 damage. This attack is called Hand of Fate.

Elemental (Elemental Shield)

Some heroes have found that they have a heritage tied to elemental powers. Often these bloodlines come from demons, furies, and elementals, but there are an abundance of other creatures tied to the elements. The most notable feature that seems to be commonly shared is their endurance against the elemental powers of the world simply because of their innate power.

Elemental Shield

Type: Periodic, Defense

Nullify the entire effect of an attack that deals earth, fire, ice, or lightning damage.

Natural (Meld with Nature)

Creatures in tune with the primal forces of the world make up what are known as the natural lineages. Descended from those who inhabit the unsettled lands, heroes of natural heritage often strive to protect the balance of nature and the natural order of things.

Meld with Nature

Type: Periodic, Healing, Utility, Channeled

After 5 seconds of preparation: become CONCEALED and IMMUNE versus all attacks that do not have the Area Effect type. The character restores $\frac{1}{4}$ of their maximum body points (to a maximum of 100 body) per minute.

Dispelled if: the character moves, becomes INCAPACITATED, CRITICAL, DEAD, or after 30 minutes.

Supernatural (Channel Essence)

Not all people are native to the world or have native heritage. Those with a supernatural heritage have an inherent tie to some form of power or another, and manifest this through their aura, granting them the offensive might of their heritage.

Channel Essence

Type: Passive

Choose a damage type from the following list: aether, astral, divine, earth, fire, ice, lightning, magic, primal, positive, starlight, or sonic. All attacks may be delivered with the damage type.

Nature

Nature describes a character's behaviors and who they are, whether it be because of their upbringing or the innate essence of their existence. A character's nature is the core of who they are and often represents a physical aspect of themselves.

Adventurous (Adventurer's Kit)

Diverse and widespread, heroes of adventurous nature seek to explore. These are the cultures that craft legends and epic tales to tell the stories of their heroes – for if they do not live long enough to bask in the world they create, they can at least ensure their deeds are never forgotten.

Adventurer's Kit

Type: Passive

The character may use an additional equipment ability in the same location as another equipment ability they are benefiting from provided it is a different Armor Type.

Athletic (Jump)

Those with an athletic nature usually come from an environment where they need to move quickly or from a home where rigorous training has kept them in great shape. The athletic person has likely lived a life on their feet and in near-constant motion.

Jump

Type: Periodic, Utility, Movement

The character is DISPLACED up to 25 feet in any direction or can move up to 10 feet vertically.

Enduring (Venin Blood)

When the world is tough, the enduring person persists by any means. Sometimes, this means eating whatever they can get their hands on or having to push through illness without care. Go through enough of this, and they can endure even the most virulent of infections and poisonous concoctions.

Venin Blood

Type: Periodic, Reaction, Defense

Nullify the DISEASED or POISONED effect of an attack and become IMMUNE to the defended status for 30 seconds.

Hardy (Fortify)

A hardy person usually comes from a harsh environment. It wouldn't be a surprise if they have broken a bone or two more than once in their past. After a while though, this kind of thing builds toughness, and the hardy person is the toughest around, able to shrug off blows that would surely have broken any regular person's bones.

Fortify

Type: Periodic, Reaction, Defense

Nullify the BROKEN LIMB or ENFEEBLED effect of an attack and become IMMUNE to the defended status for 30 seconds.

Hospitable (Bountiful Feast)

To some, hospitality is the most important quality a person can have and for many of those, that hospitality comes in the form of food. The hospitable person is always ready to cook up a meal or whip up something to feed even the most surprising guests.

Bountiful Feast

Type: Periodic, Crafting, Augment

After 5 seconds of activation: gain 5 temporary body points that last until you complete a rest.

Additional: For every additional being who uses the consumable or skill Bountiful Feast at the same time and within 10 feet of each other, gain an additional 5 temporary body points, stacking up to 20 temporary body points.

To craft as a Consumable: spend 5 minutes.

Inventive (Interchangeable Parts)

Creative and ingenious, heroes of an inventive nature tend to come up with out-of-the-box solutions for even the most daunting of tasks. For them, there is no such thing as impossible. Everything can be figured out; it just requires a unique outlook and a little elbow grease.

Interchangeable Parts

Type: Periodic, Utility

While crafting or assisting in the crafting of a Consumable item: create one extra Consumable of the same kind without spending a component.

Origin

Origin describes the environment in which the character was raised and its effect on their development. No matter where a character was raised, it always has some effect on how they grew up – whether physically changing them or just giving them a better sense of that environment.

City Dweller (Hide)

The city dweller comes from a place of winding streets and dizzying alleyways. They know the ins and outs of their home like the back of their hand, but once they know the tricks of getting around one city, it's not too hard to find the good hiding spots when things get dangerous in another.

Hide

Type: Periodic, Reaction, Utility

When targeted by an attack: become CONCEALED.

Dispelled if: the character takes action affecting another being, moves faster than a walking pace, or after 30 minutes.

Forester (Woodland Evasion)

Those who come from the woodlands tend to be quick on their feet, usually from hunting down wild game, or sometimes escaping being hunted themselves. Living with that kind of experience makes avoiding situations that can stop or slow them down anywhere else a much easier task.

Woodland Evasion

Type: Periodic, Reaction, Defense

Nullify the PINNED or SLOWED effect of an attack and become IMMUNE to the defended status for 30 seconds.

Mariner (Sea Legs)

Those who spend their life at sea often say the world is strange when the ground isn't moving beneath them. From the first day on a ship, they learn to keep excellent balance and such a feat carries over everywhere they go, even if the ground isn't trying to toss them overboard!

Sea Legs

Type: Periodic, Reaction, Defense

Nullify the TRIPPED or DISPLACED effect of an attack and become IMMUNE to the defended status for 30 seconds.

Mountaineer (Tough Hide)

Living in the mountains can be dangerous, from jagged tunnels to falling rocks. The mountaineer experienced all the pitfalls and tough lessons the hard way. Living this way toughens them up, making those falling rocks or an angry fist hurt just a little less.

Tough Hide

Type: Periodic, Augment

The character is RESISTANT to the following 5 damaging attacks to strike them.

Dispelled if: the character completes a rest or after 1 hour.

Nomad (Wanderlust)

For some people, home is where their feet are. Nomads travel the world, never in one place for long. The adventurous spirit is innate in them, and each place they visit adds stories and memories to the rich tapestry of their lives.

Wanderlust

Type: Passive

While resting: the character may move between areas without interrupting their Rest. While resting in this way they may not spend any skills or their rest is interrupted.

CHAPTER III: CLASSES AND SKILLS

Throughout your years of adventuring together, you've come to admire your friend, a vibrant, studious mage. Though your stealth and agility are impressive on their own, there is something about the mysticism of magic arts that has always intrigued you. After some contemplation, you decide to ask them to teach you, if only to supplement the skills you've already been cultivating.

With a wide grin, your companion struggles to contain their enthusiasm at the prospect of sharing their knowledge with you. They immediately launch into an animated description of spellcasting theory, complete with wild hand gestures, as they scribe illusory runes on the table between the two of you. As they discuss the tomes and texts you will be reading to learn the history of magic, you realize that even though these lessons will not be easy, you are excited to begin.

It is rare to find two individuals with identical talents. If you are not yet sure of your character, answering these questions might help you get an idea:

- What type of person is the character? Do they value cunning or bravery? Knowledge or power? Selfishness or selflessness?
- What is, or was, their profession? Does it involve martial combat or stealth? Mystical arts or mundane fabrication skills?
- What is the character's goal in this chapter of their life? Do they seek to explore and learn, to vanquish powerful foes, or something else?

Having direction for your character's persona is the first step towards a good roleplaying experience. The second step is to find a niche that is fun for you, the player, to play.

- What role will your character fill in a typical adventuring party?
 - If you like to fight in the thick of combat or defend your party, start with a warrior class.
 - If you prefer to skirmish and strike from the shadows, start with a rogue class.
 - If you like to cast spells to harm or heal, start with a spellcaster class.
 - If you would rather support your party, preparing ahead of time to outfit them and yourself, start with a support class.
 - If your interests align with more than one of these roles, consider playing a hybrid class. Otherwise, choose one for now and learn another later.

Every class page includes a brief description of what is “average” among heroes of that class, but these are simply suggestions to guide you on your way to developing a character. Not every Bounty Hunter is out to make money and not every Dragoon is descended from a dragon. Use the guidelines as much or as little as you like as you decide how you would like to roleplay.

Alignment

The world has four supernatural alignments which dictate many of the sources of power upon which heroes draw. The alignments – Dark, Light, Order, and Chaos – can exist separately or in tandem with each other.

Some classes and skills grant the character an alignment. While certain alignments may lend themselves to certain roleplay, alignments at their core do not come with roleplay requirements. Supernatural alignment is not the same as morality; the concepts of good, neutral, and evil are their own spectrum that often overlap with, but do not dictate, alignment in Knight Realms.

Learning Classes

All characters start with one class, but as they grow as adventurers, they can learn more. Whether you choose to specialize in one thing or branch out to have many talents, once you fill the requirements, you can learn any combination of up to four base classes. When a character has met a minimum number of events attended or earned the amount of build needed, whichever comes first, they may learn an additional class for free.

A character may learn their second class after 3 events or 75 build, their third class after 6 events or 100 build, and their fourth class after 12 events or 130 build. When a character learns a class:

- The character instantly gains Proficiencies skills that do not have a cost.
- The character may purchase skills in the Skills sections at the listed build costs.

Purchasing Skills

Skills may be purchased from any of the character's class lists or the Common list. When a character purchases a Periodic skill, the number under Cost represents the initial build point cost to purchase the skill.

- The cost of purchasing a second, third, etc. use of a skill is double the previous cost.
 - Example: If a skill costs 5 build, the second purchase costs 10, the third costs 20, etc.
- If the character has access to a skill from more than one class, or has multiple purchases of the class, the cost progression is slowed by one tier per class with access to the skill.
 - Example: If the character has access to a 5 build skill three times, purchases 1-3 cost 5 build, purchases 4-6 cost 10 build, purchases 8-10 cost 20 build, etc.
- The cost of a skill can never exceed 100 build. If the cost would increase above 100, it instead increases to 100.
- For the process of learning skills, please see Learning and Retraining Skills

Periodic skills may be used once per rest per purchase. In order to regain spent skills beyond when a Period starts, the character must complete a rest.

Passive and Paragon skills may only be purchased once, even if the character has access to a skill from multiple classes. Proficiencies and Passive skills affect the character at all times and do not need to be refreshed.

Paragon Skills

When a character has learned the core skills of their class, they may learn one Paragon skill. Paragons are the pinnacle of a class's power and represent a hero's achievements. Once a character has chosen their Paragon, they may not learn another from that class unless they retrain or open a second purchase of the class.

A character may learn their first paragon after 2 events or 60 build, their second paragon after 5 events or 90 build, their third paragon after 9 events or 120 build, and their fourth paragon after 15 events or 150 build.

CHAPTER IV: EQUIPMENT

After a long and arduous day of adventure, you return to town, pockets heavy with coin collected from your most recent quest. Your earlier battles have left you fairly worn, and your equipment even moreso. Perhaps, you think to yourself, it's time to invest in something stronger than the basic leather and steel you've used until now.

At the local smithy, you peruse a selection of fine wares, from the most common armaments to the most exceptional. Your eyes fall upon a sword, the blade shimmering in the evening light. As you lift it to take a closer look, you notice the greenish hue on the edge of the weapon. The sword feels right in your hands, and you are confident it can help you hunt your quarry better. You hand the smith your coin, sheath your new sword on your belt, and move on to the next shop.

- Proficiencies are granted by classes; the amount of damage gained by each proficiency is noted in Specific Proficiency Skills .

- Characters may dual wield 1-handed weapons, using one in each hand, or use them alongside shields. Versatile weapons that state the character must keep a hand free can not be dual wielded.

Armor

Armor is a worn armament that covers the specified location with a protective material, such as leather or chain. While there are many different types of armor that may be worn, Knight Realms divides all armor into 4 categories.

Wearing armor grants armor points to the character equal to the total value of the armor. Each armor type has an associated multiplier which modifies the base value and determines the number of armor points granted by each worn piece of that type.

Armor Type	Multiplier	Description
Cloth	1	Light armor made of soft and lightweight materials. Examples include gambeson, soft leather, and robes. Cloth armor must be worn as a second layer in addition to the character's normal clothing.
Leather	2	Medium armor made of thick or hardened leather.
Maille	2	Medium armor made of moveable metal pieces. Examples include chain maille and metal scale armor.
Plate	3	Heavy armor made from solid metal plates, or plates combined with leather or chain.

Location

- To gain armor points for a location, the armor piece must cover at least half of the area.
- Some armor locations may be worn on both the left and right side. In that case, each piece counts separately.
 - For example, wearing a leather bracer on each arm grants a total of 8 armor points to the character.
- A character may wear one layer of each armor type per location. If a piece of armor is evaluated to count as more than one category, IE Maille and Plate, the character must choose one layer for that armor to count as. A single piece of armor may never count as two layers even if it has the combined traits of other Armor Types.
 - For example, a character may stack gambeson, a chain hauberk, and plate pauldrons, gaining 12 armor points from each shoulder, plus any armor points gained from other areas protected by armor.

Location	Description	Base Value
Head	Armor worn on the head, such as a helm or hood. A circlet of any type may be worn but counts as cloth (light) armor.	2
Neck	Armor worn around the neck, such as a gorget or cowl.	2
Torso	Armor worn to protect the ribcage and stomach.	3
Shoulder (Left and Right)	Armor worn on the shoulder or upper arm, such as a pauldron or sleeve.	2
Forearm (Left and Right)	Armor worn on the forearm, such as a vambrace or gauntlet.	2
Upper Leg (Left and Right)	Armor worn on the thighs, such as tassets or cuisses.	2
Lower Leg (Left and Right)	Armor worn to protect the shins or calves, such as greaves or boots.	2

Equipment Abilities

Equipment abilities are granted by materials and grant a variety of helpful effects to a character wearing crafted armor. A character may only benefit from one Equipment ability per Equipment Location regardless of how many layers of armor they are wearing in a location, unless the armor card was crafted with the Smith paragon skill Metallurgy.

To invoke an equipment ability, the character must be wearing physical armor made from the appropriate material and it must cover the Location specified.

Equipment Locations:

Head - requires either neck armor or head armor or both.

Left or Right Arm - requires either shoulder armor or lower arm armor or both

Left or Right Leg - requires either upper leg armor or lower leg armor or both

Torso - requires torso armor

Hand: Weapon - requires a weapon in hand

Hand: Shield - requires a shield in hand

Hand: Grimoire - requires a grimoire to be wielded

Hand: Oculum - requires a oculum to be wielded

Some materials specify non-armor as their type, and take up the Equipment Location that would normally require a specific armor type but instead are represented by trinkets, jewelry or similar non-armor wearable items.

A character with the skill Adventurer's Kit may utilize a single extra benefit in the same location with different Armor Types.

Crafting Equipment

Crafting equipment out of materials requires the use of Flux, Catalysts, and the Material itself. Each of the three provide different conditions or effects that, when combined, will provide a multitude of abilities for armor and weapons.

Equipment Components

Equipment components may be purchased from Logistics at any time for 1 gold.

Flux

Fluxes provide an element of stability to a piece of equipment. This determines how frequently an ability can be used. The types of Flux are:

Bonding Flux - When the character is afflicted by the designated status effect, the material benefit effect is activated.

Volatile Flux - The effect of the item is Periodic. While affecting a skill this benefit is considered a combo ability.

Stable Flux - The effect of the item is Passive.

Catalyst

Catalysts determine how a material will benefit a character inside a piece of equipment. The types of Catalyst are:

Phemori Oil - Apply the effect to [Skill]

Wytchwood Sap - Apply the effect to [Spell]

Necrosine Ash - Apply the effect to [Procedure]'s target

Initrium Powder - Apply the effect to [Equipment Piece]

Materials

The world is full of diverse terrain and creatures, providing rich resources to those who know how to use them. Once crafted into equipment, these materials bestow power upon their wielders.

Materials may be purchased from Logistics at any time for triple their gold piece value.

CHAPTER V: Class and Skill Supplements

Consumable Creation

Consumable items are an important part of any adventurer's arsenal. In order to craft a Consumable, the character must have access to a skill that allows them to do so.

This crafting system is meant to provide our support type lists mechanics to roleplay out with the goal of making crafting roleplay and its contributions to the game world more meaningful.

We hope that the small expeditions and adventures that this gathering system encourages, the mix and match mini-game of the refinement system, and the recipes added to crafting, make your game experience feel a bit more full.

Basics

For creation, there are several items in two different tiers.

- Simple Components:
 - Worth 4 Silver each
 - Bestial Component
 - Bones, hide, and other bits from monsters or animals
 - Floral Component
 - Plants, fungi, and other stuff that grows
 - Mineral Component
 - Rocks, metals, and minerals
 - Ephemeral Component
 - Dying breaths, vapours, planar essences, and other things you can't hold
- Fusion
 - Worth 1 Gold
 - Shown in Table 1.1 below
 - These are created by support classes refinement abilities later on in this section
 - Meant to typify what the effect or type or consumable it is, creating common threads across different crafting classes
 - These are not unique to each list
 - These will have specific names in the recipes denoted by subtype

Fusion	Component	Component	Description
Herbal	Beastial	Floral	Remedies
Volatile	Beastial	Mineral	Explosive and dangerous
Toxic	Beastial	Ephemeral	Debilitating
Textile	Floral	Mineral	Woven fibers
Hermetic	Floral	Ephemeral	Mystical
Framework	Mineral	Ephemeral	Mechanisms

Gathering

To gather materials, a player is encouraged to take a small group of associates and engage on an expedition to find a Gathering Node. A node will always be in close proximity to main play areas such that all players can easily access the system.

Any player may gather reagents.

A Gathering Node will be marked in a general location on a map. The individual spots will have a small clear plastic chest filled with coloured plastic gems. Each gathering node will give one type of component.

Once at a gathering spot, the players should spend some time roleplaying gathering materials from the surrounding environment.

The roleplay time to gather is 20 minutes

If a willing and conscious Alchemist, Physician, Racketeer, Scholar, or Smith is with a group while gathering, the area takes 5 minutes less to gather from. This time reduction does not stack with itself or any other reductions.

At the end of the roleplay time, each player can take 1 slip and can either opt to return to logistics or stay longer to collect up to two additional slips, taking the amount of time necessary to collect in that area.

A player can carry up to three (3) slips at a time, after that, they are unable to carry any more materials.

After turning in three (3) slips, the player is unable to turn in more until the next period.

Only six (6) slips may be turned in per event per person.

To turn in the slips and gain components a character must go to Logistics and will get one (1) roll on the gathering chart per slip.

When turning in a slip, the Marshal on duty will roll 1d20 for the result and return the appropriate amount of materials. If your roll gives you an amount of fusions, you may choose which ones are obtained.

Refining

Only a character with the Alchemist, Physician, Racketeer, Scholar, or Smith class are able to properly refine materials.

This is a class ability inherent to the list and need not be purchased.

Refinement turns components into fusions according to Table 1.1 above.

It takes 1 minute of roleplay to refine two compounds into a fusion.

These cannot be purchased from logistics.

This can be done at the time of crafting the Consumable, however this time is in addition to that of the consumable. You do not need to convert item cards in this case.

Crafting

Consumables use the below recipe list These are all made according to the below recipe list in Table 4.2. Changes or additions to this list may be found or created in game.

Approximate prices and crafting time for Consumables are listed in Table 4.1:

Rank	Price	Craft Time
1	2 gp	1 min
2	3 gp	2 min
3	5 gp	3 min
4	7 gp	3 min

The fusions and consumables are spent upon the creation of the consumables and can be turned back into logistics or thrown away.

Summoning

Certain skills allow a hero to summon minions to aid them in combat. A character's minions are creatures who must obey their commands, typically fighting for them.

- A player must provide their own NPCs to portray their minions.
- Any Inquiry skill when used on a summoned creature will succeed in revealing the creator of the summoned creature.
- A character must be out of combat for 1 minute in order to summon a minion.
- A summoned creature may not speak any languages. Summoned creatures are fabricated entirely from the ability that creates them, and are not considered naturally occurring creatures of their type.
- Once a summon has been rendered incapacitated it is considered dead, and may not be healed from the dead condition.
- Players with summoning skills may choose to portray their own minion.
 - While doing so, the character may not rest.
 - If the character is using Transmute Form, this represents them transforming into the summoned creature. While playing a summon in this way the creature may speak any languages the character knows.
 - If the summoned creature dies while the character is playing their own minion, they must leave the encounter area for 1 minute before returning to play as their character.
 - The character must differentiate between the summon and the character with either a mask, makeup, or a prop.

Characters of different classes may summon different types of minions. When you summon a creature, choose a type appropriate to your class and additionally pick (from base class skills only) 2 periodic or passive skills, or 1 periodic and 1 passive skill that the summon may use. Gain one use of Perfect Guard which will negate the entire effect of one attack for the character.

The skills you chose should make sense for the summoned creature, and may not be chosen from a list of skills in class from the opposing alignment.

While summoning the character may use 20 unrefined components and increase the casting time by 1 minute to increase the health of the summon by 10, or increase its proficiency by 1. Then they may further increase the health or proficiency to a maximum of 8 total times for every 20 unrefined components used and 1 minute per increase.

Traps and Locks

Certain beings are able to lay traps for their enemies. Traps are denoted with brown or yellow string.

- A trap denoted with brown string is visible to all characters who see it.
- A trap denoted with yellow string is CONCEALED and may only be seen by a character using a Detection skill.
- The string for a trap can be up to 6 feet long unless specified elsewhere.
- Once placed, a trap will expire at the end of that event.
- A trap denoted by brown or yellow must be defended as a single melee attack with all the effects it deals, or by a defense that specifies stopping a trap.

To set a trap, a character must have the appropriate skill. After 5 seconds setting the trap by laying string to represent the trigger, choose a Consumable Attack item and any number of Consumable Trap Kits or a Trap Card. The first being to touch the trigger is targeted by the effect. The trap is consumed unless it has the Resetting Switch module.

After 5 seconds the character may also rather than set a trap, create a consumable called a trap card which can be used by characters that can set traps. The card should note what consumables were used to make the trap card at which point the consumables are used.

Occasionally, a character may come across a locked door, box, or other such item.

- Locks require 30 seconds to work at picking the lock to open it. Locks can be picked with the skill Tools of the Trade, or unlocked with the spell Lock/Unlock.

Pickpocketing and Theft

To pickpocket an item, the character must remove a black clothespin attached to a target's clothing. When successfully done, the player will head to logistics to roll on a "Pickpocketing" chart and receive the assigned award. There may sometimes be a different colored clothespin to indicate different kinds of loot. If an observer sees the player removing the clothespin, they have also seen the character attempting to pickpocket. Occasionally they may receive Stolen Items. These are noted by a red item card that indicates the item is recognizable. Anyone who sees this item may realize that it is stolen.

Dealing and Taking Damage

The act of inflicting or receiving wounds is represented as damage applied to the targets Armor or Body point total. To attack a creature, a character must first strike it – whether it be with a weapon, a spell packet, or some other form of attack – and call the effect they are inflicting. To deal damage, a character need not use a skill. A character may strike with a weapon they are capable of using and simply call weapon damage, which is a combination of the base damage of the weapon and their Weapon Proficiencies.

Taking and Healing Damage

Every character and creature in the Knight Realms world has a body point total, which represents how much damage the character can take before becoming INCAPACITATED. When struck with an effect that deals damage, they subtract the damage number from their body point total unless they are wearing armor. If a character receives healing, they add it to their present body point total but this does not exceed their maximum body point total unless specified in the skill. When a character reaches zero body points, they immediately fall INCAPACITATED.

If a character is healed from the CRITICAL effect and cannot regain body, they are rendered INCAPACITATED.

Damage Types

Whether from special weapons or from different abilities, a character may find themselves using or facing a special damage type. To a regular adventurer, these damage types mean very little, but to the right monster, their effects can be devastating.

- Certain creatures may be WEAK, RESISTANT, HIGHLY RESISTANT, or even IMMUNE to different damage types.
- All standard damage types can be gained by using weapons made of common materials or from a class of the appropriate source.

Among the standard damage types are 4 aligned damage types. These types function identically to all other damage types. When a creature with an inherent alignment – such as an undead or celestial creature – is struck by an attack of the opposing aligned damage type, they are always WEAK versus the effect.

- If a being of opposite alignment uses an item that grants an aligned damage type, they should roleplay difficulty or pain in doing so.

Specialty Damage Types

While most regular attacks simply deal damage, certain creatures, items, and spells allow a being to deal specialty damage types. The damage types are as follows – included here are also creatures commonly known to be weak against these types. Rarely, another damage type may be encountered that is not on this list, but in general, these are the only types one might encounter on an adventure.

- Acid is a corrosive damage of many biological creatures. Objects are weak to Acid damage.
- Aether is the damage of the inner planes, frequently used by demons and other destructive creatures. Constructs of most types are weak to Aether damage.
- Astral is the damage of force, frequently used by illithids and exians. Natural creatures such as beasts are weak to Astral damage.
- The Elemental damage types are Fire, Ice, Earth, and Lightning. These are frequently used by elementals and demons. Creatures tied to one element are typically weak to another.
- Divine is the damage type of Eodra, frequently used by celestials. Hellions are weak to Divine damage.
- Magic is the damage type of Arcane, frequently used by mystical creatures. Arkanites are weak to Magic damage.
- Necrotic is the damage type of Chaos, frequently used by undead and demonic beings. Plants and other non-sentient life are weak to Necrotic damage.
- Primal is the damage type of Nature, frequently used by grove spirits. Blights are weak to Primal damage.
- Positive is the damage type of Purity, frequently used by native creatures of Amanthyre. Negative energy creatures, such as undead, demons, werebeasts, and witches are weak to Positive damage.
- Radiant is the damage type of Order, frequently used by champions of the material plane. Chaotic creatures, such as undead and demons are weak to Radiant damage.
- Sacred is the damage type of Light, employed by creatures of that alignment. Dark-aligned creatures are weak to Sacred damage.
- Shadow is the damage type of Darkness, employed by creatures of that alignment. Light-aligned creatures are weak to Shadow damage.
- Silver is a naturally occurring metal frequently used by those who hunt abominations. It is particularly effective against werebeasts and other corrupted creatures.
- Sonic is the damage type of Resonance, frequently used by Harpies. Non-elemental Metallic and Stone creatures are weak to Sonic damage.
- Starlight is the damage of spirits, frequently used by ethereal beings. Shades are weak to Starlight damage.

Occasionally, a character may encounter uncommon damage calls; these are not damage types, but modifiers added to an existing damage type, including regular damage. They each have their own effects, listed as follows.

- Bane damage does not deal any additional effects, but the target may never be RESISTANT, HIGHLY RESISTANT, or IMMUNE to any part of the attack, even if a skill possessed by the target would cause them to reduce the damage taken or the duration of a status.
- Drain damage affects the target normally, but restores body points to the user. If Drain damage is defended against, the user does not restore body points.
- Body damage ignores a character's armor point total and directly affects their body point total.

Falling Damage

If a character falls from a significant height, they may be injured. For every 20 feet the character falls, they suffer 20 damage. For every 50 feet the character falls, they suffer BROKEN to a limb.

A character cannot survive a fall greater than 400 feet and will immediately enter the DEAD condition.

Death and Resurrection

Bleeding Out

While some lose consciousness and eventually fade, after the final rings of battle a hero may seek out their salvation.

- An INCAPACITATED character may choose to become CRITICAL at any time, representing them giving up hope of being healed.
- While no targets are within range of sight, an INCAPACITATED character may crawl using their arms and legs only to move towards salvation. Once the character can once again see a being they must remain motionless and await whatever fate befalls them.

Killing Blows

When a hero fells an enemy in combat, they may wish to finish that enemy off by performing a Killing Blow.

- Only INCAPACITATED beings within reach of the character are valid targets for Killing Blows.
- A character can perform a Killing Blow on a target only once.
- Performing a Killing Blow requires 5 seconds of uninterrupted activation time, during which the character should roleplay accordingly.
 - A Priest might pray over the body, a Marksman might line up a fatal shot, or a Berserker might simply continue attacking.
 - Whatever your roleplay, it should end by pointing at the target and calling “Killing Blow.”

After being targeted by a Killing Blow, the target immediately becomes CRITICAL. After 1 minute has passed, the target will become DEAD.

- A Killing Blow may be redirected, such as with the skill Intercept, as a regular attack. If a creature not INCAPACITATED becomes the target of a Killing Blow, it has no effect.
- Only Defense skills that specifically nullify Killing Blow may be used to defend the effect.

Death

When a character reaches the end of their CRITICAL count, they are considered DEAD. While this would be the end for an ordinary being, the souls of heroes are not so easily bested, and certain skills may help a character return to the land of the living once they have passed. Many heroes return from the grave once, twice, or several times, while some have been known to perish at their first death.

Character death has distinct meanings from an in- and out-of-game perspective.

- From an in-game standpoint, death is mysterious and unknown.
 - On average, a heroic soul can be resurrected once or twice, but there is no method to tell if a hero can return once they die. If a hero falls in combat, only time can tell if their soul is strong enough to be brought back to life.
- From an out-of-game standpoint, returning from death is a player's choice.
 - When a character dies, or at any other time, the player may choose to retire the character and start anew. If the player wishes to continue playing the character, they may instead choose to be resurrected.
- Certain events may arise in-character with the threat of permanent death.
 - A player will never be forced to participate in an encounter on which this is a risk. Prior to these encounters, players will be informed of the possibility of character death and given a choice of whether or not to proceed.

If a player chooses to allow it, their character may be returned to life after death. At any time after becoming DEAD, the player may don a blue headband to represent being a spirit. While most beings cannot see spirits, some heroes have the ability to, whether from their supernatural abilities or keen sense of perception. Any player may choose whether their character is able to interact with some or all spirits and may change this at any time.

- Spirits may not make attacks or use any skills.
- Spirits are intangible and may not use or trade items.

Resurrection

To resurrect a spirit, the character must perform the resurrection process for at least 5 minutes.

- Think about how you want to roleplay the resurrection process.
 - Do you craft a new vessel for the being's soul? Do you use dark magic to bring them back from death's door? Do you make an offering to a deity to pray for their return?
 - Resurrection is a personal process – no two characters are required to engage in the same roleplay to perform it.

- When developing your resurrection style, include the target of the resurrection in the process where you can.
 - Ask them questions about their life and motivation to return, have them engage with you in ceremony, or simply discuss with the other player what their character is experiencing.
 - Remember that roleplay shines the most when it is shared with others!

When a character is resurrected, they are healed to their maximum body points, cured of all statuses, and considered to have completed a rest. The character suffers resurrection sickness until they report to Logistics to roll on the Death Chart.

- A character suffering resurrection sickness cannot rest.
 - Once a character rolls on the Death Chart, they are cured of resurrection sickness.
- The Death Chart determines side effects of resurrection – some good, some neutral, some bad.
 - This chart is subject to change on a consistent basis to introduce new results, include special effects related to a weekend story, or provide a chart unique to an individual encounter.
- Resurrection cannot be utilized with Create Scroll.

Reanimation

Characters with the Reanimation skill may perform limited resurrections in combat. If a DEAD being has not yet become a spirit by donning a blue headband and less than 10 minutes have passed since their death, they are eligible for reanimation.

To reanimate a being, the character must spend 1 minute performing the reanimation process.

- A being resurrected through Reanimation does not suffer resurrection sickness.
- A reanimated being is healed to their maximum Body and cured of all statuses, but does not complete a rest.

Though reanimation has the same mechanical end result as resurrection, the roleplay to get there can be quite different. While Resurrection is typically a mystical ceremony, Reanimation is more often a medical procedure. Develop a personal roleplay style for reanimation just as you would for resurrection!

The Hero's Saga Death System

A Knight Realms Supplemental Rules Set

The death system helps to facilitate the saga of a hero's life. Character death is an important story narrative; it is not as punishment.

The Rise, Fall and Redemption of a Hero

Sometimes the most rewarding stories are of the hero that rose to power, fell hard to the depths of failure, and then clawed their way back to the top, to shine brighter than ever before. This narrative can be played out in our death system.

The Rise - Growing through skill and advancement

Through adventuring a hero grows in skills and power. A hero never stops learning and growing, even when they are suffering from a mighty fall.

The Fall - Dying and accumulating scars that affect a hero deeply

With each resurrection comes mental and physical scars. An unchecked accumulation of these scars will push a hero further and further down until they hit the bottom, becoming in essence a Fallen Hero. Some heroes may perpetually engage in small falls and small rises, but the more dramatic the fall, the more glorious and rewarding the rise. Those are the heroes that tales are told of.

The Redemption - Healing your scars and making a legendary comeback

The scars of resurrection heal slowly through time, however the process can also be expedited through self questing and seeking out aid from ancient masters. The tale of rising back from the depths of despair is the cornerstone of a heroes saga.

The Legacy - Passing behind this world for good, leaving your legacy upon it.

There will come a time when a character's story is done, when they no longer have the will to resurrect and instead embrace eternal rest in the afterlife. Great heroes leave a lasting legacy upon the world that affects it long after they have gone.

Scars and the Fallen Heroes

When a character resurrects, they accrue Scars. Each scar adds a -1 to the roll on the resurrection chart, increasing the likelihood of the worst outcome. For every 6 months a character plays a scar will be removed.

When a character accrues 8 scars they now suffer the condition “Fallen Hero”. When a character is a Fallen Hero the character is reduced to a maximum of 10 body points and cannot increase above that and may no longer use defensive abilities. Only when the character no longer has any scars will the effect go away. When a character reaches the status of Fallen Hero, a staff member will reach out to work on establishing a possible redemption arc.

When being resurrected, roll a D20. The character will suffer the Mental and Physical effects of that roll. If you dislike the outcome, you may always choose to subtract one from your roll, but then you MUST take the new effects. You can never move from 19 to 20 from an outside modifier. Rolling a natural 20 or 1 is never modified.

The Easing of Scars

Using Psychologist you may reduce the duration of a scar by a month each month, so after 3 events of treatment the scar will expire after the end of that third event.

Removal of Scars

For every six months 1 scar is naturally healed. Powerful plot NPCs may be able to work with a character over time to expedite the removal of their scars. Some rare plot quests may reward those who have earned it, the removal of scars as well.

Good Drama vs Bad Drama (Choices and Role-Play)

The desire to feel the fullness of hitting rock bottom and pulling yourself out can make for good drama and storytelling. If you desire this role-play then you are allowed to slightly fast track your scars. You may always choose to take on double the scars from a single resurrection. You may even wish to take this self imposed increased detriment for a particularly cool or meaningful death. If you do not desire the role-play of a fallen hero, then you should never choose to double your scars taken from a resurrection. If you are one who is seeking this path, you should not die purposefully four times during a single event in order to achieve a fallen hero status. This will more often than not just look forced and appear as bad RP. Better and more meaningful role-play and storytelling is to let the deaths happen organically and only choose double the scars if you are aiming for the role-play of the fall and redemption.

A Characters Final Story

Although we do not force an end to your character's story, there are several points in which we will encourage it and reward it, if it is chosen by the player. A fully immersive world includes the feeling of the loss of fellow adventurers, and so if you have the ability to let a character go and have fun with a different one, then we welcome and encourage those moments to be able to be felt in the game world. If you are happy with the way your chosen final death happened you may choose to let it be as it organically happened. If you desire a better end, then you may express to a staff member that you would like their help in staging your character's final end.

When you consciously decide to retire a character through death, you gain the following benefits which stack and become greater the higher the power the character is.

250 build - Character is honored at yearly awards banquet (+1 Background)

500 build - Special plot introduction of new character (+1 Prestige Skill)

1000 build - Ancient or Noble Character Ties (+1 Background or Legendary Background)

2000 build - Ritual of the Legacy (+1 Prestige Skill)

Character Resurrection and Scars

When being resurrected, roll a D20, and choose an effect from one column. If you dislike both, you may always choose to subtract one from your roll, but then you MUST choose from those new effects. You can never move from 19 to 20 from an outside modifier. Rolling a natural 20 or 1 is never modified.

The effects of a roll persists until cured.

Your total number of mental and physical scars persist with you even if you have chosen that the role-play or mechanical effects have faded, which is your right to do after the remainder of the event they are attained has passed. There are some extremely rare ways to remove the persistence of scars such as rolling a natural 20, lengthy plot questing, or through rare and limited exalted abilities.

CHAPTER VI: MISCELLANEOUS RULES

Player Characters and Non-Player Characters

Beings that exist within the Knight Realms game world are called characters.

- While there is a clear out-of-game distinction between player characters (characters created by players) and non-player characters (characters created by storytellers and other game staff), in-game, all characters are beings with their own free will and objectives.
- While individuals retain ownership of player characters they create within the Knight Realms universe, Knight Realms reserves the right to use the name and likeness of any character that has appeared within the game world.

Heroes are beings born with powerful souls possessing the ability to increase substantially in power. A hero's growth in their lifetime is exceptional compared to that of the common person. This is represented by earning build and learning new skills past level 1.

- All player characters – even those who do not participate in conventionally “heroic” activities – are considered to be heroes.

If a player knows information about the game world, characters that exist, or events that have occurred within it, they may choose to have their character also know this information.

- This includes any lore posted on official Knight Realms pages, storylines run at events, and information shared between players between events.

Roleplaying

Roleplaying is the act of playing as a character different from yourself. Characters have the capacity to have emotions and motivations far different from the player that portrays them and it is encouraged for players to explore this difference as they play the game.

- While it is not required to do so, it is highly recommended to come up with several points to distinguish character from player in your roleplay.
- Knight Realms follows a philosophy of “play what you want.” Your character can be a warrior whose strength comes from a magical bloodline rather than training, a mage who weaves spells using divine power, or anything else that fits within the confines of the world!

- If you are uncomfortable at any time with another player's roleplay, you are always free to leave a scene using the Lookdown rule, or report the offending player to game staff if they are causing issues.

In addition to developing your character, you will often find yourself engaged in roleplay with others, interacting with the environment, or working with a storyteller to achieve a goal. In these situations, you are free to describe your character doing just about anything, as long as it doesn't give them power beyond their card or over another player.

If your character is a rogue, you might use some of these ideas:

- Your character always has a trick up their sleeve. They can produce small objects from unseen places.
- Your character can perform feats of accuracy, such as knife throwing or shooting an apple off someone's head.
- Your character is skilled in simple sleight of hand tricks, such as street magic and card tricks.
- Your character is dextrous and can perform feats of acrobatics, such as gymnastics or walking a tightrope.

If your character is a spellcaster, you might use some of these ideas:

- Your character can perform minor mystical tricks, such as summoning dancing lights or sounds, changing the color of an object, or cleaning a dirty spot off their clothing.
- Your character has an animal or mystical familiar, which they can summon at any time.
- Your character has power over natural elements and can cause plants to grow or wither, or alter the weather around a person.
- Your character can manipulate light objects from afar.

If your character is a support class, you might use some of these ideas:

- Your character studies a variety of mediums and can develop minor creations, such as concentrated alcohol, preservation solutions, or small clockwork objects.
- Your character has experienced many experiments gone wrong and can withstand smells and sights more grotesque than most can handle, such as sulphur, viscera, or other ghastly concoctions.
- Your character is always prepared to work on a project and can usually produce tools and spare parts, or find something close enough to do the job.
- Your character is learned and understands advanced arithmetic, geometry, astronomy, and music.

For example, if your character is a warrior, you might use some of these ideas:

- Your character is skilled in surviving in the wilderness. They can easily make camp, find food and water, and build a fire from very little.
- Your character has studied the art of swordplay and can perform deft maneuvers, such as cutting objects in half midair.
- Your character has seen many battles and is able to withstand most pain. They can easily make an improvised weapon out of almost anything.
- Your character has a high tolerance for liquor or other intoxicating substances.

These ideas are merely suggestions and guidelines, not rules – you can either use them as-is or take inspiration from them to form your roleplay. However, if you are performing a roleplay effect that affects another character, they must consent to the act for it to succeed.

Casting Roleplay Guidelines

Tools to Help Improve Your Casting

Introduction

At Knight Realms, we offer many ways to pursue your character's roleplay, including the manner in which you cast spells. It may feel intimidating to conceptualize how to do this. However, we are all here for the same reasons; To have fun and immerse ourselves in a world beyond our own! If you get nervous don't worry, take things at your own pace and feel free to ask for help. Whether it's diving in feet first or slowly wading in, we are here to support you and help you tell the story you wish to tell. We hope this guide will assist you in that endeavor.

Methods of Casting

Casting a spell takes three seconds of uninterrupted roleplay. The questions to ask yourself are: What is most comfortable for me? And what is most appropriate to my character? The goal is, of course, to be comfortable doing so in front of a crowd of people. After all, we are roleplaying, we are always on stage!

In the examples, we will outline the three most common methods of casting spells.

Verbal Casting

In the fantasy world, we hear mystical incantations and words of power to activate spells, or perhaps invoke prayers to a deity. It may feel strange when you are not comfortable with what you want. Writing them in a spell tome can help with anxiety, reading from a book can feel like a shield between you and the listeners and help with that awkwardness (after all, you are reading it, not making it up on the spot!).

Casting should be impactful. It is important to make sure that your verbal feels appropriate. One method would be writing your verbal down, and practice timing yourself with a stopwatch. Your goal here is for your speech to feel natural, not too long nor to trip over words getting to the end. Another option would be making your verbals mystical words that are one second per word, to give yourself a clearcut metric for your spellcasting time.

If your hands are both occupied with wielding armaments, or holding objects not related to the casting of spells you must use verbal casting.

Examples of Verbal Casting

If you are unsure of what you want to use, here are some examples of common verbals:

Bards: When considering spells for a bard, research appropriate poetry or song lyrics. About three lines should suffice to match your time. Narrative storytelling can also be a fun and interesting way to play a bard (ie. “The monster raised its blade to strike the hero, but the sound of battle confused it! -Cacophony-) **

Druids: “By the immense power of nature’s most sacred wish, I cast/summon...”

Empyrean: “I beckon the gale force of the northern Anteries winds to summon...”

“I command the might and magic of the solid earth to summon forth...”

“I call upon the volcanic powers from the eternal plane of fire to cast...”

“I beckon the mercurial power of the northern tides to summon...”

Hexer: “From the deepest shadows, in the realm of eternal darkness, I cast...”

“I invade the sanctity of spirits, and defy the laws of death to cast/summon...”

Mage: “With the absolute ruse and deceptions of light, I conjure trickery to cast...”

“By the arcane powers of the weave, I summon forth the power to cast/summon...”

Priest: The 12 Eodran Gods can have holy words associated with each

Aguara: Bellum, Clamor, Labor, Laboriostus, Adflictatio

Andorra: Amare, Carus, Amentir, Fertilis, Amplexor

Brazen: Incito, Molior, Creo, Propositum, Erigo

Chronicler: Tempus, Fatum, Historia, Exubitor, Fatidicus

Enax: Pareo, Imperu, Regnum, Dominatus, Compenso

Gaia: Victus, Aetus, Humanus, Terranus, Tellus

Galladel: Ferox, Defensor, Consilium, Praesidium, Nutricius

Galmachis: Exilus, Inceptum, Mortem, Mors ad, Caducus

Glomm: Pravus, Decipio, Vitiosus, Mutatio, Vicissitudo

Malyc: Obscurtis, Tenebrae, Confusus, Pertubatus, Caligo

Valos: Iustus, Claris, Lumen, Inlustrate, Ferentarius

Visigalis: Multis, Deorum, Partum, Unum, Consilium

Somatic Casting

Somatic casting is the use of motion to cast your spells. The sky's the limit when it comes to how you can represent your spells in the physical space. This might be an easier way to cast your spells if you, or your character are shy or uncertain in public. You do not need to speak and, you can use props such as a wand to cast your spells.

When somatic casting, the gestures or movements should be clear enough for others to see. It might take some practice, and is recommended that the movements feel natural to you. Moving more naturally will help you improvise actions and visual displays because you will be acting in a way that is comfortable for you

Examples of Somatic Casting

Here are a few examples of common ways to cast somatically:

Hand Gestures: A player could use hand gestures to indicate the action of casting which can flow easily into the throwing of a packet or the swinging of a sword for weapon casting. This can appear as drawing runes or symbols in the air or on a weapon, or making interconnected movements with your hands akin to “Finger-tutting”.

Psions: A psion may motion with their hands compressing the ambient energy around them into form before casting out the spell.

Mage: A mage might draw a runic symbol in the air with meticulous precision before activating it and throwing the spell.

Healer: A healer may wave their hands over the area injured while concentrating to let energy flow from them to heal the wound.

“Prop Assisted”: This refers to using a staff, wand, or other kinds of casting phoki. In this fashion, the player might wave a wand in a specific pattern or hold out a casting phokus and make a demonstrative motion with it.

Bard: Do you play a musical instrument? Show off your skill by playing! we strongly suggest not using your most expensive instruments in case of damage!

Priest: A priest might hold out their holy symbol and brace it to channel the power of their god into whatever spell they may be casting.

Empyrean: An Empyrean might hold out something connected to the element they are channeling, or touch the element such as placing their hand on the ground to channel an earth spell.

Component Casting

This is the least common method, yet simple to pick up if you are interested in having a more tactile experience when casting your spells. Component casting uses props to achieve your spellcasting, such as bottles of dust, leaves, liquid, or other disposable items.

Component casting may take more forethought in building up your supplies, however it adds a new depth to the way you play your character. That does not mean you have to buy expensive props to dispose of every time! Collect ash from a firepit to represent grave dust, or sand for ground diamond, or even crushed dried leaves to represent herbs will still give the same value without any cost!

Examples of Component Casting

Consider your spell packets as part of your roleplay. These packets are not simply representations of your spell, they are the spell. Carry a satchel or pouch of packets, roleplay adding these vials and catalysts to them. You can use different items you've picked up to act as though you are making your spell concoction in the moments before throwing the packet!

This takes the form of a more practical magic rather than a metaphysical magic, but is still just as viable as the other. And while you put these things together, you can just as easily count down in your head the time you spend performing the action.

Some examples:

Druid: Power comes from the land itself, so when ready to cast the spell, the druid takes components from the terrain around them and presses it into the pouch together with the enchanted sap or ash they carry on them before throwing the packet at their enemies.

Hexer: A pinch of grave dust, a scraping of dried blood, mixed with the bile of some vile creature. The Hexer smears it over the blade of a sword to enchant it for a devastating strike.

Healer: Over the wound, the healer mixes purified water with a crystalline substance into a cataplasm so their healing energy will react more efficiently.

Psion: The psion draws a small crystal from the air or their pouch and hands it to their ally. Both focus on it to activate and summon forth the power contained within, granting that ally a mystical benefit.

We hope this guide helps you with your spellcasting and makes playing the game feel more immersive. As always we encourage discussion and sharing of ideas that might help other players as well on our discord and community pages!

Headbands and Safety

Knight Realms uses colored headbands and hand signs to denote different states of being, which are outlined here.

- White headbands signify that the player is out-of-game. Characters should treat the player as if they are not there.
 - If you do not have a white headband, you may instead touch your closed fist or weapon to the top of your head. This should be done for short periods of time only.
 - You should always carry a white headband on your person during an event.
- Green headbands signify that a player is non-combat. Other players may not strike them with spell packet or weapon attacks.
 - A player wearing a green headband may not participate in melee combat, but may use ranged weapons and spell packets.
 - The non-combat state exists solely for the comfort and safety of players. At any time during an event, you may choose to put on or take off a green headband according to your level of comfort with combat at that time.
- Red headbands signify that the character is CONCEALED. Other characters should treat the concealed character as if they cannot see them.
 - If you do not have a red headband, you may instead bend your arm at a right angle over the lower half of your face, as if holding a cloak or sheet in front of it, to denote concealment.
- Blue headbands signify that the character is a spirit.

In addition to these headbands and associated signs, Knight Realms uses several additional safety systems.

- At any point, a player may call “Hold” to immediately pause all gameplay within earshot.

- This may be used for safety or by game staff for a variety of other reasons.
- While in a Hold, all players must remain in place and quiet, unless it is necessary for them to do otherwise (such as giving instructions or moving for safety reasons.) You may not take IG actions while in a Hold.
- During a hold, all in-game timers are paused.
- When the Hold is resolved, the player who called it should call “3-2-1 Lay on!” to resume gameplay.

Because calling a Hold can be disruptive to the game, if you can accomplish what you need to without calling one, you are encouraged to do so. To help avoid frequent holds, Knight Realms uses several hand sign systems.

- OK Check In¹ is designed for players to check in with each other if a participant in the scene seems uncomfortable. To check in, make the “OK” hand sign (making a circle with your thumb and pointer finger) in front of your chest.
 - If a player responds with a thumbs up (“I am OK”), continue the scene as normal.
 - If a player responds with a thumbs down (“I am not OK”), immediately end the scene. Ask the player if they need to be taken to an OOG area to decompress.
 - If a player responds with a flat or waved hand (“I am unsure”), still ask the player if they need to be taken to an OOG area to decompress.
- Lookdown² is a bow-out system designed for players to gracefully exit a scene.
 - If you are no longer OOG comfortable participating in a scene, you may bow your head and place your open hand a few inches in front of your eyes. Be sure to not obscure your vision when doing so.
 - Immediately exit the scene.
 - If a player exits a scene using Lookdown, no other players should follow them. The player will not receive any IG consequences as a result of leaving, but may not use this system as a way of avoiding other IG consequences.

Periods

When a scheduled npc shift begins every character regains all spent periodic skills and natural armor. Unless stated in a skill, all Latent, Enhancement and Augment effects end.

² Designed by Johanna Koljonen and Trine Lise Lindahl.

Resting

After a long and arduous encounter, most adventurers want nothing more than to relax and recuperate their strength. Resting allows the character to regain any 10 spent periodic skills or the effect of a passive augment.

To complete a rest, a character must remain in a single area for a half hour.

- During this time, they may not use any skills.
- If the character's rest is interrupted by combat, their rest timer is paused but they do not regain any skills.
- If the character leaves the visual range of the area in which they start their rest, their rest time is reset.

When a character has rested, they are ready to take on the next adventure.

- All non-passive Augment and Enhancement skills benefiting them are dispelled.
 - Most Latent abilities, unless otherwise specified, persist through rests.

Retirement

Retirement is the process by which a player may entirely rewrite a character's statistics into a new character.

- When a character is retired, all earned build is transferred to a brand new character.
 - Characters created from retirement do not gain starting build.
- The new character retains all wealth from the retired character. Items may be turned in for a gold piece value or kept as is, with the exception of unique plot items.
- A character may be brought out of retirement at any time, but begins play again at starting level unless the player retires another character into them.

If the player wishes to pre-script a retirement scene with a story runner, they may do so. The resulting character loses 25% of their total build and wealth, which may never be recovered, even if the character is brought out of retirement. A character retired this may not be brought out of retirement for at least one year.

- If a player wishes to bring a character retired in cooperation with a story runner back into the game, they must work with the story runner prior to doing so.
